

JDL Digital Systems DBA Airship VMS Inc. (further referred to as Airship) provides a suite of software products that enable video, audio, and metadata collection and management at the enterprise level. Airship's product portfolio is split between government and commercial, with the government product portfolio being specifically tailored towards the unique requirements of federal law enforcement video surveillance operations.

Airship's current customer base includes multiple agencies across the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), Department of Justice (DOJ), and Other Government Agencies (OGA). Specifically within DHS, Airship provides these tailored goods and services to components within Customs and Border Protection (CBP), supporting a variety of overt and covert collection requirements for groups within the agency along our borders.

Airship's software is DHS Office of Chief Information Officer (OCIO) compliant, meets all DHS 4300a Sensitive Systems Handbook requirements, and has an Authority To Operate (ATO) or Conditional ATO to run on DHS trusted networks.

Airship is a 100% US minority owned small business, with all Airship employees, assets, and facilities residing in the Continental United States (CONUS). Much of Airship's technical staff, including our development and support team, are cleared by agencies within DHS, providing direct access to the DHS trusted networks that our software runs on.

Airship routinely performs customized software development and integration efforts on behalf of our federal law enforcement customers, through our US based development and engineering team, in coordination with a wide range of third-party sensor and analytic companies. Airship's small size and dedicated focus to supporting federal law enforcement collection operations makes it an ideal choice for future rapid development and integration requirements within this space.
